

BETSY McCALL WRITES A LETTER FROM CAMP

Dear Mommy: Guess what! Your daughter is an Intermediate—too old to be a junior, too young to be a senior. My bunkmates are dreamy. Two of them are twins, June and Jane, and the third girl's name is Jean. Isn't that crazy? Sandy's camp came down to visit ours—it's a few miles up the lake. The girls think that Sandy is cute, and maybe if he weren't my cousin, I'd think so, too. Anyway, the way they met him was funny. There's a big, long cave up here in the hills, and if you even whisper in it, you hear an echo. June, Jane, Jean and I were whispering all sorts of silly things, and our echoes just seemed to rumble into each other. Suddenly, there was a deep, loud voice, shouting, "Stop! Who goes there?" Were we scared? Jane said, "Let's sing something, to prove we're not afraid." We couldn't think of anything but "Are you sleeping? Are you sleeping?" And the voice sang back: "No, I'm not! No, I'm not!" Then we weren't scared any more, because we knew somebody was just being funny. And when we came out of the cave, who should be there, pretending to be asleep on a big rock, but Sandy, with three of his friends! Their whole camp had paddled down for the afternoon. We had a big wienie roast, toasted marshmallows and sang and danced folk dances. Next week, our camp is going to visit them. Isn't that great? Love, Betsy. P.S. Please send me my blue hair ribbon. Bob likes girls in ponytails. He's Sandy's bunkie. He's cute.
